Nothing Definite Done At Meeting on Wages

Meeting Adjourns Without A Definite Action Taken

There was not much heavy work at the meeting held in the town hall last Friday evening for the purpose of discussing the wage scale on local industries.

As only one industrial representative and one merchant were present it was impossible to get enough life in the meeting and the meeting adjourned without any definite action being taken.

Mr. A. Maskell who was instrumental in calling the meeting was chosen as chairman. He said he was prompted to starting the movement because of a statement made by an official of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, at one of its meetings recently when he condemned Sweat Shops. Mr. Maskell said he thought it was the duty of the citizens to see that employees were given fair wages as no community could be built up on low wages. At this point the men could not pay taxes and utilities at slave wages. He blamed the cutting of prices of the products for this condition as naturally the cut came off the workmen.

Councillor Moore said he was satisfied men could not submit on 25c an hour and that it must in some cases wages were not as large as the dose handed out by the government.

How wages went that the town in turn was not getting the revenue necessary to carry on. He thought that if a plant could not pay decent wages it should be forced to close down.

Mr. J. Stratton pointed out at while he was in favor of higher wages in some cases conditions did not warrant it in a plant which he represented. One per cent of the revenue was paid out in wages.

Mr. Sangster asked if industries were the only places where complaints could be made about wages. To this Mr. Maskell replied no. He said he knew of a married man not in an industry who was getting 10c an hour or less.

Several suggestions were made as to means of getting employers together with a view of having wages raised but no definite action was taken and the meeting adjourned.

Scotland Good Buyers Of Canadian Wheat

Also Makes Best Bread in British Isles

Year in and year out Scotland has been a constant buyer of Canadian wheat, and it is interesting to note that in the first six months of this year that country purchased more wheat from Canada than in the corresponding period of the two previous years.

Scotland obtains her wheat supplies principally from Canada and Australia, usually purchasing in the proportion of five parts from Canada and one part from the southern Commonwealth.

It might also be noted here that Scottish bread has the reputation of being the best in the British Isles.

Town Council Has Quiet Session Monday

Very Little Business To Come Before The Meeting

A very quiet session of the Town Council was held last Monday evening as very little business of importance was up for discussion.

The School Board asked for $1000.00 for school purposes. The request was granted.

R.C. Cam waited on council in connection with agreement with Quarry Lodge for rent of 1000 ft. Hall. The agreement was renewed for another year.

Several bids on buildings belonging to the town were submitted and were referred to the building committee.

Several buildings in town reported to the town for non-payment of taxes and a monthly rent was set on them to be charged to the occupants.

The monthly accounts were approved for payment.

Mr. A. Dubeau wrote offering $500.00 for house at Third St. The matter was referred to the building committee.

An account for $1450.00 from Medicine Hat Hospital for patients from Redcliff whose accounts had not been paid, was submitted. The account was left over for investigation.

New School Regulations

At the regular meeting of the school board last Tuesday it was decided that for this year the age for the small enrolment in the primary room, all children will be admitted to the school whose sixth birthday is reached before April 1st 1936.

Parents should take notice, therefore, that several prospective pupils who were turned away last week may now be admitted. Birth certificates will be required in all cases.

B. N. A. Act is Now Obstacle to Reform

Premier Bennett Wants Conference To Allot Powers

Obstacles to reform multiply when provincial rights under the British North America Act that passed nearly 70 years ago, served its purpose for a long period, but it no longer fits with modern social and economic conditions. We are in a new era, which is imperative for a revision of the act.

Mr. Bennett, who favours the calling of a conference of the provinces to consider a redistribution of powers as between provincial legislation and federal government, has declared that the constitution must be amended "if we are to be in a position to deal adequately with the many problems that have arisen during the past few years."

It is obvious that certain basic principles, such as the rights of minorities, must be safeguarded, but it is equally true that obstacles to progress and legislation should not be allowed to stand in the way of much needed reforms.

The whole situation demands clarification and co-operative action between the provinces and the federal government to secure a constitution suitable to the new economic and social conditions. It is manifestly futile to pass legislation in the public interest but contrary to the present constitution which will be declared null and void. Such legislation is a waste of time and energy, and those who are calling aloud for acts of this character are misleading the voters, especially those voters who unwittingly believe that this hurry up call for legislation is based on a solid foundation. Such expectations cannot be fulfilled.

Mr. Bennett is undoubtedly right. The work of revising the act will be a tough job, because of the many cross currents of opinion as to the lines of demarcation between federal and provincial rights, and the known views of some provincial premiers regarding the acquisition of additional rights at the expense of the federal government. Nothing worth while will be accomplished by a conference unless there is real statesmanship looking to the advancement of Canada as a whole instead of sectional interests.

Important Notice For Little Theatre

Meeting To Be Held In The Parish Hall, Monday

As it was thought there was not a large enough attendance at the Little Theatre Meeting last Monday evening to undertake anything definite for this season's operations it was decided to call another meeting for next Monday evening Sept. 16th. This meeting will be held in St. Ambrose Parish Hall at 8 o'clock in the evening when it is hoped that all old members will be present so that it can be definitely decided what is to be done this season. All are urgently requested to attend.

The High School Literary Society met in the High School room for their weekly meeting yesterday. The first part of the meeting took the form of a business meeting. The latter half was composed of impromptu speaking and a current event match. The speakers were: Ellen Hope, Edith Collis, J. P. H. Shelders, Kaja Madson, G. J. Callanette, Annie Bolton, J. J. Maillard and Effie Stratton. A vote was taken as to who was the best. Effie Stratton was voted the best and Geo. Baller was second. The Current Events match was won by the ice presidents team. Mr. Kire gave the pupils a talk and the meeting adjourned.

The Harvest Festival will be held on Thursday and Sunday Sept. 26th and 29th at St. Ambrose church.

Dr. F. W. Gershaw Is Liberal Candidate

Will Be Opposed By G. M. Blackstock and S. C.

Dr. F. W. Gershaw, M. P. Medicine Hat's Liberal Member of the House of Commons, Sept. 25, will again contest the riding under the Liberal banner at the federal election on Oct. 14. He was the unanimous choice of a well attended meeting convention held in Park Hall Medicine Hat Friday afternoon. Delegates were present from all parts of the constituency, one of the largest in the province.

G. M. Blackstock, K. C. is the Conservative candidate, who was selected at a convention some time ago. There will also be a Social Credit candidate in the field. It was decided at a convention held in Medicine Hat last Saturday. Three men were selected. These were: W. T. Fleming, and A. E. M. Smith of Medicine Hat and F. Mueller of Husker.

Wheat Prices Set at 87 1-2c Fort William

Producers to Share in Wheat Profits May Accrue

Wheat producers of the far western provinces have been assured through the Canadian Wheat Board, of a price during the current crop year based on the northern laid down at Fort William. This price is guaranteed to the government by the board after consultation with its advisory committee, was confirmed last Friday by order-in-council, and announced for the first time by Premier Bennett at the close of his radio address.

Established by act of the last parliament, the Canadian Wheat Board is empowered to buy direct from producers and pay at a rate based on this fixed minimum, giving participation certificates which will enable the producers to share in whatever profits may accrue from the board's operations. If there is any loss the whole is borne by the board which is supported by the Dominion government.

At a meeting of the Social Credit selecting committee at Medicine Hat last night Mr. A. Mitchell, farmer of the district, was chosen as the S.C. candidate.

To Organize For The Basic Dividends

Work Will Be Voluntary and Cost Province Nothing

Preliminary steps in preparation for provincial wide registration of Alberta citizens for the Social Credit basic dividend of $25 monthly will be started immediately through an elaborate network of workers in each of the 53 provincial constituencies it was announced yesterday by Acting Premier Manning.

The work will be conducted by the campaign machinery set up by the Social Credit party for the last general election. Men who served for the party at that time will prepare the way for registration by organizing each constituency for registration. The work will be voluntary and will cost the government nothing. Mr. Manning pointed out.

"Oil For Lamps of China," a Big Picture

"Oil for the Lamps of China," a latest Cosmopolitan production released by First National pictures, which comes to the Empire Theatre on Monday for 3 days, is heralded as both a most powerful drama and a stirring human document.

The novel by Alice Tisdelle Hobart, upon which the picture is based, is a most colorful description of the life of American miners in China, who fought flood, fire and famine, as well as pestilence and banditry, to carry on for the American firms whose business they carried.

The scenes for the most part are laid in the Orient, including snow swept plains of Manchuria, Peking, Shanghai and the myriad interior.

Pat O'Brien has the leading role, that of an American fired with enthusiasm to make good with his company, a great oil sear, and to bring light to China by way of lamps and oil.

Geologist Verifies Story Of Naas Indians Regarding Volcanic Eruption In B.C.

British Columbia, although free from frequent volcanic eruptions for centuries, experienced one such disturbance which, as geologists count time, is comparatively recent, according to Dr. George Hanson, who arrived from Ottawa recently, to continue work in northern B.C. for the geological survey of Canada.

Some years ago Dr. Hanson, in course of his work in the Naas River district, found occasion to study the geology in the vicinity of Lava lake and the Tseax river. Although impossible to place the age of the lava flow in the vicinity accurately, the geologist verified to a certain extent an old legend of the Naas Indians.

Handed down from generation to generation was the story of a great punishment visited upon the Naas tribe, which had a prosperous village on the Tseax river. A million years ago, placed the time at only 150 years ago, but Dr. Hanson's studies placed it at probably 300 years.

Tseax river was a gathering place for salmon. Annually the Indians harvested a great crop of salmon which assured them of food against the hardest winter. But one night some of the exuberant young braves, all in play, of course, paraded about the village with blazing pine cones. The chief was frightened and the medicine men predicted dire calamity.

Calamity came. A nearby mountain peak the next night began to blaze. Belching flame and smoke was followed by a million years ago, placed the time at only 150 years ago, but Dr. Hanson's studies placed it at probably 300 years.

That's the Indian story. The lava in the area is the youngest of rocks. The flow, says Dr. Hanson, is 20 miles long, covering an area 10 to 15 miles wide, and is from 10 feet thick. It flows down the Naas river to a much greater depth in the vicinity of the extinct volcano.

The basaltic lava issued from or near the base of a huge cone, 300 to 400 feet high, which has since crumbled to the top. This is surrounded by four fewer cones, each with its small crater, indicating that these, too, were erupting in company with the larger cone. The lava dammed back the water and formed a lake a mile long. The water in the lake rose beneath the lava, which is almost devoid of vegetation.

Dr. Hanson declares that the strong noise of boats are worn through in only a few hours, walking on the lava, which is like, hard rough glass. Trees and bushes in the area are estimated to be 370 years old, and this fact, together with geological observations, place the lava at probably 300 years—which is not old to the geologist.

Dr. Hanson was taking a party to go into the Dease Lake area, farther north, and the intention is to cover some 1,300 square miles east of Dease lake and including the Tanquish river.

The Practical Joke

Sometimes Result In Accidents Which Have Fatal Ending

Practical jokes are not often fatal; when they are they happen to come pharisees with particular force the folly of all practical jokes. At a Pennsylvania picnic, an excellent swimmer took to his canoe a friend who could not swim. As he paddled out into the lake he chuckled inwardly, for he had told friends earlier that he meant to capsize the canoe and give his companion a good scare. A little distance offshore, in the sight of a group of friends all prepared to laugh, the canoe tipped over and the two occupants disappeared under the water. Neither reappeared, for the man who could not swim locked his arms around the neck of the man who could, and together they fear few legends of supernatural strength. Two men paid with their lives for a joke that would not have been very funny even if it had been successful and harmless.

More often practical jokes merely result in wounds and bruises, and sometimes of a serious nature. All too often they have more serious after-effects. Whoever first described them as practical can describe have been numbered among their victims.—New York Sun.

An Entertaining Sculptor

Made Money Out Of Work Which Was Not Accepted

Unexpected fame has come to a foreign dentist who was summoned to Nanchang, China, recently from Shanghai to relieve a very bad toothache. At the request of the former Governor of the province, the dentist had his attention drawn to the work of a young Chinese sculptor, who was invited to satisfy the dentist. He paid the sculptor for his trouble, but refused to accept the finished bust. The enterprising sculptor used the bust to a Chinese dentist, who exhibited it in the window of his establishment. Not to be content, he sent the bust to a Chinese dentist, who exhibited it in the window of his establishment. Today the likeness of the man who pulled the teeth of a foreign dentist occupies the central position in the shop windows of many dental offices.

THE SHADOWS

Brighten Your Shadows

A place of white cardboard brightened this shadowed face

Have you ever tried taking a picture of your best girl—or your wife—wearing her new broad-brimmed summer hat and find when you see the finished print, that her pretty face turned out to be an unattractive dash shadowed face? Of course you have. Who hasn't?

Now there is really no excuse for this. The engineer and transparent photograph. You can prevent the appearance of the shadow hat or you can lighten it considerably in the picture by using a reflector to cast or reflect necessary light upon the chin of the hat and on her face.

These don't gap and think about spending a lot of money for a reflector if it isn't necessary. A satisfactory, efficient reflector can be had for practically nothing. Any number of things will serve you. A piece of white paper, about three feet square, a white cloth of the same dimension or even a pillow slip or white towel, if the chancelor of the linen closet will let you get away with it, will serve admirably.

It's the trick! There's no trick to it at all. This is all you have to do. Suppose we use the pictures of the comely young lady above as an example. Both snapshots were taken at noon with the sun's rays striking from the left. In the first, the sun is to the right; how the brim of the hat casts a dark shadow over the face. The picture to the left, however, shows the pleasing results by using a reflector to cast or reflect necessary light upon the chin of the hat and on her face.

This is only one of the many ways a reflector may be used to advantage in getting better pictures. By giving a little thought to your snapshotting you can readily detect where a reflected light on your subject may brighten over-shaded spots in outdoor or indoor picture making. Try

Full Rye Useful Crop

May Be Grown For Grain, Hay Or Pasture

Full rye is a very useful crop that may be grown for grain, hay or annual pasture. In areas where drought prevails it is particularly adaptable as a utility crop for various purposes.

Experiments at the Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Saskatchewan, indicate that highest yields of grain are obtained when the crop is grown on fallow at the rate of 1½ to 1½ bushels per acre. Full rye may be sown in stubble, without any previous cultural treatment, and a clean stand obtained. The yields, however, have been less than forty per cent. of those obtained on fallow.

When grown for hay purposes full rye should be sown on the same date as for grain. The crop should be cut about six weeks after the first of May and the hay will be coarse and unpalatable.

When full rye is to be used as a supplementary pasture in a permanent pasture, two seedlings may be sown in the fall, one in the fall and one in the spring. These seedlings are required to supply pasture for the year. These would consist of the two seedlings mentioned above and one seedling early in the spring for midsummer purposes. The spring and summer seedlings can be improved by adding oats to the fall rye, using thirty per cent. of each. This combination should be produced at a rate of about twenty per cent. of each.

In order to produce a good pasture it is essential that all stock be kept off the full rye until the grain has been established. This Weaving said the grain should be left untouched until it reaches a height of from four to six inches. After this time the place is well rooted and will stand a great deal of grazing. When grain is grazed before the roots are well established, it is quite frequently pulled out and consequently the pasture soon becomes bare.—Experimental Farms Note.

Names Of Famous Men Live In Everyday Words As Well As In History

A Fretwork Artist

Mill Worker Finds Time To Make Models At Night

William Albert Weaving, of Port Colborne, Ont., is one of the most skillful fretwork artists in the province. Four years ago Weaving was a happy married young man with a little son and daughter. Then his wife died, leaving him to look after his family alone. He has done this, has worked in a mill day by day, and found odd hours for recreation in building fretwork models at night. His son is now eight, and he and his daughter work every day with their fretwork tools.

Weaving has a great number of finely finished models. Of these, he is proudest of one, the Lord's Prayer tablet, Nelson's monument, St. Paul's cathedral, the Lord Mayor's coach, London, and the Blackpool ferris wheel. This work on these models represents close to 1,000 hours and more than 1,000 pounds of wood. Each tiny scrap of plywood is cut so finely and placed so expertly, however, that the models appear as though carved.

Weaving was born in Fowey, a coast resort in England, and the home of Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch was in the village. He started his first fretwork club. "This little group has become interested in carpentry as well," he says, "and later it branched out as the first group of 'sea snails,' an organization that is now active all over the empire." Weaving is a member of the club. He designs his own patterns and books regularly on a book from his built house.—Toronto Star Weekly.

New Air Service

U.S. Asking For Bids On Service From San Francisco To China

Plans for regular air service from San Francisco to Canton, China, were revealed at Washington when the United States post office department asked for bids on weekly service each way to include Honolulu, Hawaii and Manila, in the Philippines. Shortly before, President Roosevelt had signed the second deficiency act, providing $1,000,000 for the first year's operation.

The service, which would carry passengers and mail, must start within a year after the contract is let, the advertisement said. Demand for flying upholstery of United States makes the post office department specified multi-colored seats, with a cruising speed of 120 miles an hour and capacity for at least six passengers and 800 pounds of mail.

Generous Impulses

If Not Carried Out Will Never Do

Each of us has his generous impulses. Just having them, and giving them, a little encouragement simply as impulses, perhaps ought some times to be counted upon as our righteousness. It is quite conceivable at any rate, that if we didn't have them at all we would be poorer specimens of humanity than we are. But generous impulses that are never carried out, and never made to realize themselves in some sort of realistic fashion, must have only a very superficial kind of virtue. If at some times seem to happen, we flatter ourselves on having them and meanwhile have no intention of doing anything with them, they may not prove to be virtues at all. The good deeds that we mean to do but never get done will never comfort any hearts or relieve any necessities.

Did You Spend as Much Money Before I Married You?

"Then I can't understand why your father went on so when I took you away from him."

The English language has its origin in many, many places. Words come from many sources, and it is fascinating to trace their history. Many who might have expected to go down to posterity for various reasons would not be forgotten were it not that their names live in everyday words. Some who were expected posterity to bear of them at all would be astonished to find their names to us as household phrases to-day.

Wellington and Blucher, the victorious generals of Waterloo, doubtless imagined that their names would echo through the ages as the conquerors of Napoleon. But to-day they are remembered by the Wellington and the Blucher club, and by Napoleon himself, do we ever think of him as we play the card game, Nap?

Lord Raglan was commander-in-chief of the British forces in the Crimean War. We have forgotten that, but we recall that he gave his name to the Raglan effect. The man who commanded the Light Brigade in the Crimea was the Earl of Cardigan, whose name is given to the charge. It is our time is his invention of the woolen jacket known as the cardigan. To Gladstone we owe the Gladstone bag.

The peerage has given many words we use daily often without realizing it. The word Derby, for example, was in 1780 by the 12th Earl of Derby. The Derby that owns its name to the same family. When we eat sandwiches, we owe the name to Lord Sandwich, who gave us the word? Lord Brougham, another great name, has given us the word for it was not for the type of carriage known as the brougham.

From the names of kings and queens are derived many words, principally place-names and fashion terms. The Medici color and Louis XIV. color, for example, are terms of fashion. The name of the Emperor of all the Russians gave his name to the famous race, the Cossack. Whole groups of inventions derive from the names of the inventors. We have Maxim, Lewis, and Gatling guns; Colt revolvers, Remington Winchester rifles, Marconi, Morse, Mackintosh, and Marconi will always be associated in our minds with certain inventions. The old-fashioned daguer-type process of photography was discovered by Louis Daguerre.

Many cuts are called after their founders—Calvinism, Wesleyanism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism. The names of Epicurus and Pallas have come down to us from earliest times. "Episcopus" and "Pallas" are the names of the original "Penny" was Matthew Parker, Archbishop of Canterbury, Master of Corpus Christi College.

Captain Bly, who was stranded in 1880 by the entire population of Commodore, was a Commodore for his infamous treatment of the town teenantry, gave us the "teenantry" word. The popular system of "banning" dates back to a Mr. Banning, a London merchant, who, in a letter on Corporations, written in 1881, recommended a bid for keeping down banns.

When Hobson, the Cambridge shoemaker, made a practice of refusing to hire out to customers any horse but the one nearest the door—that is, the one who had been longest in the stable—did we ever dream that his name would descend to future generations in the phrase "Hobson's choice"? Mr. Hobson, whose real claim to fame was his refusal to the Corn Laws, lives in the public mind in the slang term for policemen—"Hobson's choice."

Made Of Paper

"Peanna straw" hats are now being shown in many of the millinery shops in Berlin—but they are made of paper. No great is the guarantee of the hat and such materials that paper is now being used in great quantities for general purposes. The postal authorities are even using paper string for tying up mail packages.

Trick-flying Birds

Many Can Perform Feat Of Flying On Racks

There is a story of a price of $25,000 for a bird which could fly on racks. The bird, which he kept twenty thousand pigeons at his court, and would send his prices to heaven if any of his birds performed the remarkable feat of flying on their backs. Yellow pigeons and others knew that the way to his favor was to make him a present of trick-flying pigeons. They were doubtless tumbler which, after circling to a great height, will turn a series of complete somersaults, landing and again, as if revelling in their tumbling.

More often the trick-flying birds, which threads its way unerringly at full speed through a mass of trees and bushes, of famous horses, like the kestrel, soraers and gliders like eagles and buzzards, and divers like the game and, and that are many which can perform this feat of flying on their backs. Lapwings do so, in the frenzy of their spring fever, also. When engaged on their court flights in April, after circling high aloft one will occasionally swoop down with a pair of feet on the earth, then turn completely on its back, and carry on this inverted, for several hundred feet.

These birds dive and turn somersaults in the course of their aerial sports in the spring. At the moment of landing, the bird, as if to signal, the feet, the birds utter a loud croak.

Erk's power of flight are somewhat of a mystery. It is said that they fly, upwards or downwards, but occasionally a rook will fly back towards the earth, as if to signal, the feet, the birds utter a loud croak.

One insect does possess the power of flying backwards, so that it need turn when having advanced and open a small pond—the dragonfly.

Start Battle Against Rust

U.S. Relief Workers Out To Destroy Barberry Bushes

Washington.—With tons of salt for ammunition, the guard of 2,000 relief workers in the United States have marched out to try to drive black stem rust from the wheat belt. E. B. Fracker, of the agriculture department, estimated the $2,376,800 work relief program will hasten completion of barberry bush eradication in 17 states by from six to ten years.

Only by destruction of barberry bushes, scientists have discovered, can the spread of rust be controlled. And salt, piled over the roots of the barberry bushes, has been found to do the work most effectively.

The dried rust germinates early in the spring on the leaves of the barberry bush. Orange-colored spores on barberry leaves contain thousands of rust spores. These are carried by the wind to growing grain, where they send tiny threads through the stems and drain the moisture and nourishment which would go to the grain. The result is a greatly reduced yield of small, shrivelled wheat.

The government began its barberry eradication program, in cooperation with the states in 1914.

Fireman Was A Hero

Found Saving Baby Was Easier Task Than Holding It

Saving a baby from the wheels of an engine is one thing, but holding it while her worshippers praise you is quite another, according to M. Hollander, a fireman on a railroad in Denmark. The child's mother was working in a field near the railroad line and the cot craved on the tracks just before the moving train was due. The engineer and fireman saw it too late to stop. The engine applied the brakes as Hollander ran along the foot of the side of the boiler, jumped from the front and pulled the babe from the tracks just in time. The train stopped and mother and passenger ran to Hollander, now blushing and trying to find a way to hold a baby. He never had such a thing before.

Shirley, It's Good To Know You're Back

Glorious Shirley Temple, whose natural art is second to none, and who has, in the words of Irvin S. Cobb, "made more people happy, and more children laugh than any child your age in the history of the world," is here again.

Her new Fox Film picture,

"Our Little Girl," starts its engagement today at the Empress Theatre. It is called her greatest!

This is said to be Shirley's most touching picture. She plunges into an emotional adventure that sings in the heart as she bravely meets a bewildering crisis while those who are nearest and dearest to her grope in the shadows of misunderstanding.

Shirley's brave smile revives a waning love, when she pleads for her mother's return, and runs away from home to reunite her parents.

In addition to acting the child wonder sings.

Enjoying a short stay at the Ball's Springs Hotel on his way to taking up his post in London, His Excellency T. Matsudaira, Japanese Ambassador to Great Britain, stated to an interviewer, "I prefer just to enjoy myself and to forget for a few hours that there are more serious duties than the contemplation of this lovely place."

Addressing a gathering of the Rotary Club of Victoria at the Empress Hotel, recently, Premier Joseph A. Lyons, of Australia, pointed to the British Empire as a great force for peace and urged Canada to cultivate a more favorable trade with his own country. Last year, he said, Australia bought from Canada $17,000,000 worth of goods, while Canada bought from Australia only $2,000,000 worth.

New Rust Resistant Wheat

Seed May Be Available To Farmers
By Spring Of 1937

The return to the Prairies Province this year in epidemic proportions of that dread scourge of the wheat grower, namely wheat stem rust, is focusing attention on the work which has been in progress during recent years in connection with the production of varieties of wheat which are capable of resisting this disease.

A question, which the farmers in the most seriously affected areas are asking with evident interest and concern is: When will seed of this new wheat be available? The answer is that while several varieties of rust resistant wheat are being tested in different points in Western Canada, that are so far believed to be the best two or three varieties are being increased as rapidly as possible and according to L. H. Newman, Dominion Cerealist for the Dominion Experimental Farms, it is reasonable to expect that by the spring of 1937, there may be available several thousand bushels of seed, in lots of two to four bushels to each farmer.

Resisting tests for milling and baking have been made on the best varieties of rust resistant wheat that have so far been evolved as a result of about 20 years of work started by the Dominion Department of Agriculture in 1916 at the Dominion Experimental Farms at Brandon, Manitoba, and Winnipeg, Saskatchewan, and subsequently carried on at the Dominion Research Laboratory at the Dominion Experimental Farms at other points under the auspices of the Associate Committee on Field Crop Diseases, the members of which are representatives of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, the National Research Council, the Faculty of Agriculture, the various universities and the provincial departments of agriculture. The results of the tests so far have amply justified the expectations of the plant breeders.

Approves Of Royalty

Socialist Sweden Has No Desire To Make Any Change

One of the hard-working royal families in the world retreated to summer palaces, waited by a strenuous season of festivities and ceremonies, but not without a certain amount of mental satisfaction. The members of the Swedish royal house, from top to bottom, have had convincing proof that Socialist Sweden has no apparent desire as yet to do away with kings and queens. At the wedding of Princess Ingrid to Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark, the largest number of guests to assemble in Stockholm received their approval of a royal family.

Stucky Socialist workmen asked the steelworkers, climbed trees and struggled for a chance to look at royalty, along with dyed-in-the-wool Royalists. Sweden, with a Socialist ticket in one hand, used the other to wave a handkerchief at a princess who married a prince.

Outrich Is Clever

Can Camouflage Bird In Order To Avoid Capture

The catbird does not bury its head in the sand when pursued; it has the much cleverer plan of camouflaging itself. The natural house of the catbird is the boulder-strewn void. When in danger of capture, the bird sinks down and huddles itself up. With its smoke-grey feathers, their natural color before they are treated for export—the catbird so closely resembles the mass surrounding boulders that careful search is necessary to pick it out.

Famous Tapermaker Dead

World-famous tapermaker, James Gordon Gray, died recently in Glasgow, Scotland, where he was professor of applied physics at Glasgow University. His top was the tiny, cone-shaped, little instrument in which his father, Professor Andrew Gray, specialized. So valuable were his inventions that the United States Government offered him an appointment to the Warrenton, but he preferred to continue his work at Glasgow.

Making Cotton From Straw

Turning straw into cotton may make Japan independent of imports if Dr. Sui Tsunaka's announced development of a special process meets industrial requirements. In his report to the Japan Chemical Society, Tsunaka said he had had up to the idea during intensive research in dye stuffs and cellulose, the latter the chief constituent of common straw.

Most Important Product

Japanese People Prefer Rice Green
In Own Country

In view of the prolonged negotiations between Canada and Japan, the following extract on the Japanese economic conditions of agriculture from the 1932-33 report of the International Institute of Agriculture may be of interest. It is needless to repeat here, says the report, that the whole of Japanese agriculture rests on quite a particular way on two products: only rice and silk. Although there has been evidence in Japan in recent years of a certain tendency to emerge from the "rice-growing economy" characteristic of its economic structure hitherto, it is unquestionable that rice remains, nevertheless, the most important product of the whole country.

It must be added, in order to see the problem more clearly, that when we speak of rice, we mean Japanese rice, that is to say, rice produced in Japan proper so-called. The Japanese people find that foreign rice has not the taste of the home-grown article, and this explains why the production at lower cost of Indo-Chinese or Siam rice is not in any way supplanting home-grown rice, which, because of its lower price, is in competition with it. Only in famine years, when the price of rice is low, are the poorer classes of the population constrained to replace home-grown rice by imported rice which, because of its lower price, is within their power to purchase. In recent years the Japanese colonists have succeeded in improving the quality of the rice produced in Korea and Formosa and the pressure of colonial rice production has already begun to be felt on the domestic market.

On account of the preference of the Japanese people for home-grown rice, the importation of rice from abroad is practiced only in so far as it is necessary to make up for the deficiency of the home production and it has no influence on the rice market. In the family budget, the purchase of rice represents the largest item, being often as much as 25 per cent. of the total expenditure among the poorer classes of the population. Thus, there is no room for wheat.

Highest Death Rate

The highest death rate in the world is in China, according to a survey completed by the National Health Administration at Nanking. The million persons die annually in China, their average age being 30. The population of the country is estimated to be 450,000,000.

More than 1,400,000 persons paid two cents each last year to enter railway station platforms in London without boarding trains.

Armaments are estimated to have cost the nations of the world $12,500,000,000 last year, or three times as much as in 1913.

The Most Popular Toys

Those With Which Children Can Do
Some Work

A survey of children, which has just been concluded in America, to find out what things are most popular as toys has led the investigators to believe that the dictionary definition of a toy as "that which serves to amuse" is insufficient. Apparently the toys that children really like are those with which they can do some work, even if it is only painting a picture, building a mecano model or reading a book.

Unless a doll can be dressed or otherwise manipulated, it is of no particular interest to a girl, and a boy will abandon an expensive model yacht which cannot be sailed for a piece of wood which can. Similarly, a parent discover sooner or later that expensive mechanical toys soon lose their charm, and children will return happily to fearful and wonderful "creations" of their own, or to ambitious contraptions of their own designing. Moreover, it is noteworthy that children brought up in households where economy is a necessity are usually far more imaginative and ingenious and get far more fun and happiness out of their "make-believe" and their few toys than do the children of wealthy parents, with unlimited sources of amusement on which to draw.

World's Hardest Job

Attendants Must Feed Birds A Diet
Every Fifteen Minutes

The hardest job in the world? Attendants in the bird house at the New York Bronx zoo voted recently feeding hummingbirds every 15 minutes as one of the most exhausting tasks. Three birds recently received from Venezuela are being cared for. A fourth died. The three collectively weigh three ounces. Because of the constant flapping of their wings the birds cannot hold food and use up their energy quickly. Every quarter hour the attendants have to see to get their diet of sugar water.

FANCIFUL FABLES

Hotter Than The Sun

Temperatures Of Welding Area Several Thousand Degrees Higher

Discovery that man has surpassed the heat of the sun has been made with a new camera at Schenectady, N.Y. Your favorite star on the screen is seen by virtue of the light from the temperature of a flaming carbon arc which is 4,000 degrees hotter than the surface of the sun. In some new welding arcs the heat flashes momentarily several thousand degrees above the sun's heat.

The common carbon arc, used in most movie theatres for searchlight and for illuminating the entrances at first nights, has a temperature of 3,400 degrees.

The tungsten arc burns at 11,300 degrees Fahrenheit. In certain welding arcs the hot core stands at 10,300 degrees. The noisy spitter of some of these arcs is made by heat fumes, which may jump to more than 15,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The camera reads the temperature by photographing a semitransparent in the flaming gas of the arc. The sound is made by a loud speaker at one end of the arc, and travels the length of the arc, visible as an extra glow. The heat waves of light. The realer the arc, the faster the speed of the sound it carries.

The camera, "viper" this way, and photographs its spread, by aid of a little revolving mirror, which makes accurate exposures lasting only two two-hundredths of a second.

Dr. Chauncey Guy Burt of the new research laboratory devised the new method of measuring intense temperatures.

Plenty Of Questions

Traveler Found Order Break
After He No Small Task

A traveler who likes his English and wears he wouldn't let an untruth about them, is just back from the Motherland with a little lack of the sign of the cross of St. George.

He was a week-end guest, he said, at a big estate in Surrey which was completely without electricity, and his first morning there, the maid who brought him his can of hot water queried him about his breakfast.

"Tea, coffee or milk?" she asked. Mindful of where he was, he selected "Tea." "Very good," she said, "and will you like Ceylon, China or Assam?" He didn't know anything about Assam, so he chose the "Milk, cream or honey?" she said, "Milk," he said, and thought the matter was settled. "Very good, sir," said the maid. "Jenny, the nursery, if I may."—The New Yorker.

Hazards On The Farm

Latent To Be Added Is Shock From Electricity

In this age of electricity, the latent hazard added to life on the farm is electrical shock. The passage of electrical current through a human body through a human causes paralysis of the higher nerve centres, resulting in the stoppage of breathing. The failure of the normal tests of life should not be taken as evidence of death. Persons have been resuscitated after having almost died, although ordinary signs of life were absent. In cases where the contact was of short duration and where artificial respiration has been applied without delay there is a better chance of recovery. Although, in reality resuscitation from electrical shock is a case for the medical man, or at a pinch for those men of the power and telephone companies well-trained in the art of artificial respiration, there are certain things that everybody can do. In shock accidents the victim is usually thrown clear of the live wire or apparatus, but if it is not the case the obvious signs of life are to be looked for. The sooner the contact, the greater the chance of recovery. The victim should be kept warm by the help of a blanket or a coat. Notwithstanding the fact that resuscitation decreases in hot summer months, warmth is of great importance. The patient should be wrapped in warm blankets and hot water bottles applied. A person partially shocked should be made to lie down, and it is a point to be remembered that, owing to lack of tone of the blood vessels, it may be fatal to allow the patient to get up too soon or stand. Artificial respiration, of course, is of the greatest importance, and should be continued in all directions. Efforts in artificial respiration should be kept up for at least four hours until the patient breathes or until the signs of a return of rigor mortis are definite.

Had Right Idea

Do Something Was Motto Of Unemployed News Reels Boy

One of the prettiest examples of courage from breaking down the morale and good health of ambitious young Canadians is offered by Hubert Smith, 20, jobs-farmer of Amherst, N.S.

His motto is—do something. That is what he did. Gathering together a few belongings, some blankets, a tent and his bicycle, he started out on May 15 for a tour of Canada.

He reached Vancouver recently, ruddy-faced, happy and in the best of health after cycling 3700 miles across Canadian highways with an 80-pound load.

"I feel fine," he stated with a wide grin. "I had no serious trouble on the road and slept out every night. I'm taking the best of Vancouver today, and I'll travel over there for a few days."

He encountered fine weather until he reached the coast. During the trip, which cost approximately $50, he purchased his meals wherever convenient, and camps when night set in. The expense he expected to offset by working during harvesting time, which he started on July 11.

The young man made no attempt to set a speed record and went out of his way to visit the large cities. The route followed was entirely in Canada with the exception of a trip to Duluth. When he arrives in Amherst again he will have covered 8,000 miles.

Monument To Dog

A monument to the unknown dog was unveiled at the Institute of Experimental Medicine in Leningrad, U.S.S.R. The inscription on the monument, bearing the stone image of a dog, reads: "In memory of all dogs which have given their lives for physiological experiment for the purpose of prolonging human life and improving human health."

The Next Best Thing

Butty was in disgrace. He had told an untruth, so he had been punished and sent to his room to study "The Life of George Washington." "And try to follow his example," his father had said. Next morning Butty came rushing in crying "Papa, I've started. I've started. I couldn't find any cherry tree, so I've dropped down all your gooseberry bushes."

SYNOPSIS

Nancy Nelson is a girl-deb, a gay, irresponsible girl of nineteen, with no care beyond the champagne and the pleasures of her coming-out party. Suddenly, in the market crash, she is obliged to face the fact that she has no money, and that her father has no money.

At this juncture a letter is received from an eccentric relative in Colorado, who offers the girl a home on a ranch, to be in charge of the place.

Thus much accomplished, Matt took her to a place where they had not chocolate and delicious sandwiches; and on the way home he drove with excellent success, even after the danger of a snow storm was behind them.

"Well, it's very home," she said, and added, laughing: "That sounds exactly like Aurora, doesn't it? I've had a great time, Matt, and I do appreciate your telling me the tale along. If your cousin's stockings don't turn out the right size, the missusman said they could be changed. I know your mother will love the lines—any one would; and—Will you look at that?" They were approaching the Nelson "mansion" now. "There's a light in the parlor! Is the president, or governor or some one calling on them?"

"That they were approaching the Nelson 'mansion' now. 'There's a light in the parlor! Is the president, or governor or some one calling on them?'"

"The looked up, at Matthew this time. There was, Nancy saw, an inscrutable smile curving his lips as he said: 'Let's go in and see.'"

CHAPTER XIV.

Nancy was never to forget the moments that followed. As Matthew walked toward the door, she saw three sharp blinks on the automobile horn, and said: "Don't bother with all those bangles, Nancy. They'll get lost in the snow."

Matthew, who was standing at the door, was puzzled by the amazing illumination that she failed to see. As they went into the parlor, she saw that they were in the room of the late Mr. Nelson, and that the late Mr. Nelson was still there, and that the late Mr. Nelson was still there.

"Shut up!" commanded Matthew, blushing, while his mother slipped a protecting screen through his arms. And Aurora announced shrilly:

"Come on! Get seated while I dish up the potato. Sakes alive, Nancy, you look like those pictures in the love magazines. And you too, Matthew. And that white shirt's awful becoming. Everything's ready and all these candles lighted. Come on in!"

"I never saw a prettier table," wrote Nancy to her mother. "Even that awful green-brown china was inconspicuous because it blended with the green velvet of the curtains. It was just as if they were in the room of the late Mr. Nelson, and that the late Mr. Nelson was still there, and that the late Mr. Nelson was still there."

the little tree gay and pretty, while she listened tensely to Father's returning step and the longed-for whistle (it was, she told me, like the song of the hermit thrush in New Hampshire), with which his always heralded his arrival.

"No white noise came that night, and at last, bitterly disappointed, fearful for his safety as she always felt at any untoward delay, his mother crept into the big bed and dropped asleep. No doubt her pillow was wet with tears; but though several brighter and the morning, it was a beautiful day. A flurry of snow had fallen in the night. Every bush and tree was white and frosted, which made her think of Christmas in old New England; and I, of course, was twitting with excitement, she could scarcely persuade me to breakfast I was so eager to examine every ornament and open the two windows to the topmost boughs of my small tree.

"At last she pushed aside her solitary. This morning they could wait, for after all, Christmas comes but once a year. She drew a chair close to the little tree; took me on the lap and put into my hands one of the gifts she had prepared so lovingly. You see, she had contrived to dole out of her Christmas cheer, and painted their faces very cleverly; and dressed them in scarlet flannel; and from an old petticoat, wrapping them separately so that I would have more to open."

For a moment Miss Columbine sat silent, as if thinking; then she went on: "I do not, of course, remember every detail of this story; but it was told so often that the scene rings in my memory very clearly. I was entranced with my doll that I forgot to be curious about the other packages; and as I sat there on my mother's knee, caressing this new baby, something, possibly the scene of 'Selling watches,' drew her eyes away from me for a moment, and she saw her poor heart almost slain by the thought of her father's loss."

"My soul!" breathed Aurora in an adoring whisper, and if she hearing her, Miss Columbine continued:

"Perhaps you young folks can't realize what that meant to a pioneer woman alone in her cabin save for a little child. Instinctively her glance rose to the rife lying ready for use on a shelf behind the stove; then she fell to the fire; that emblem of Peace on earth, goodwill to men; and just as the door swung rattled violently, she came to a decision."

Altar Brought From France

Hidden in Woods When English Captured French Port

In the early days of the war, a French priest, who was a member of the French navy, was captured by the English. He was taken to a prison, and there he was kept for a long time. He was very brave, and he was very kind to the other prisoners. He was very popular among the other prisoners, and he was very respected by them.

It is probable that all those present agreed with the girl. When at last they arose from the table and went to the altar, the priest was the first to go. He was very brave, and he was very kind to the other prisoners. He was very popular among the other prisoners, and he was very respected by them.

Each one added his bit to the entertainment. There were choruses; old-time songs with religious overtones; a play (a melodrama brought from Chicago in 1881); Miss Columbine assured them promptly; as well as a story of the war. The priest was very brave, and he was very kind to the other prisoners. He was very popular among the other prisoners, and he was very respected by them.

The explanation.

Mayor: "I never saw the park littered so with paper as it is this morning. How do you account for it?"

Superintendent: "The park commissioner had had leaflets distributed yesterday and people tend not to throw paper about."

Bill Still Cracked

When Bill Still was installed in London 75 years ago, the huge bell cracked. Another bell was cast, but this also cracked on installation. It has remained cracked ever since.

Constance Columbine smiled as Matt drew her chair in the centre of the group.

"The going to tell you about my first Christmas tree," she began. "I couldn't have been more than three or four years old, and Mother and I were alone in the house on those days when Father was out adventuring. We were expecting him home, of course; but on Christmas Eve when he did not come, Mother went out and set a tiny Christmas tree before it, and set it up in the corner of our room."

"I realize now that for months, possibly longer, she had been saving every bright scrap of ribbon, or calico, or paper that came her way, saving them to make a merry Christmas for her baby; and after I was born, she had saved them all those lovely hours trying to make

Quality in Binder Twine

Inspection in Recent Years Has Shown Steady Improvement

The binder twine being used to harvest Canada's grain crops comes from a number of sources. Canadian made twine supplies a large part of the domestic demand and considerable quantities made in the Dominion are exported to other countries, but, binder twine from several other countries has come to share the Canadian market. The greater part of the importations into Canada are from Great Britain, Ireland and Holland and in recent years small quantities have also been received from Belgium and Germany.

The law requires that each ball of binder twine sold in Canada shall bear a label stating the number of feet of twine per pound in the ball, whether 500, 250, 600 or 100 feet. This is a case where quantity is the estimate of quality. Inspectors of the Dominion Department of Agriculture find Branch Inspect Canada made twine at the places of manufacture and imported twine at storage warehouses, and by a system of measurement and calculation determine the actual number of feet per pound as compared with the length guaranteed.

Results of binder twine inspection in recent years have shown a steady improvement in both Canadian and imported twine used in Canada. From three hundred samples were taken of the twine distributed in Canada in 1934, the tests showed that 47 per cent. had actually more twine to the pound than was guaranteed and 14 per cent. had exactly the length guaranteed. The remainder of the samples had some shortage which was considerable in most cases and only 25 per cent. had a shortage of over 5 per cent., which is the limit of shortage allowed by law.

Tenants suffering in binder twine is not subject to legal control. Inspectors, however, give some attention to this factor but it is now seldom that a sample is found in which the twine strength is too weak for ordinary grain binding.

GORDON MEMORIAL LAD

FLOWER SERVICE SENDS

Flower services were held in Gordon Memorial Church last Sunday. On platform, railing, and pulpit, a marvellous display of blooms met the gaze as our entered the church. When considered the time of the year and the dryness of our climate, the display was all the more remarkable.

Appropriate musical selections were rendered by both choir and the themes were: "Cher-

a cure for Anxiety".
The pastor thanked all those who so generously donated flowers and the ladies who so artistically arranged the same for the services.
